SUMMARY

Broadcom Inc. (Broadcom), a semiconductor company supplying to companies including Apple, Cisco, and Dell, ranks 37th out of 45 companies. Since 2022, the company began disclosing the methodology underpinning its human rights risk assessment and the use of RBA VAP audits to monitor suppliers for forced labour issues. However, the company did not improve across other themes. The company performed particularly poorly on the themes of Purchasing Practices, Enabling Workers' Rights and Remedy. As such, the company's score has dropped by 6 points. The company's score is based on its stronger performance on the themes of Commitment & Governance and Recruitment. KnowTheChain identified one allegation of forced labour in the company's supply chains, related to alleged Uyghur forced labour. However, the company does not disclose the steps it has taken to address the risks of alleged Uyghur forced labour across raw materials and supply chain tiers.

Steps the company could take to address forced labour risks in its supply chains include strengthening its disclosure and practices on the themes of Traceability & Risk Assessment, Enabling Workers' Rights, and Remedy.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR IMPROVEMENT

Traceability & Risk Assessment: To demonstrate a strong understanding of its supply chains, the company may consider disclosing the names and addresses of its first-tier suppliers, the countries in which its below-first-tier suppliers operate, the countries from which it sources raw materials at high risk of forced labour, and data on the demographics of the supply chain workforce (such as the percentage of women and migrant workers). While the company has disclosed its methodology for human rights risk assessments, it is unclear whether workers or their representatives are consulted in identifying risks. The company is further encouraged to disclose the risks identified through this process

Enabling Workers' Rights: While the company has a grievance mechanism open to "suppliers" to report breaches of the supplier code, it is unclear whether supply chain workers, their representative and other relevant stakeholders, such as worker organisations or labour NGOs, have access to the mechanism. To prevent and address forced labour risks in its supply chains, the company should ensure that a formal and effective mechanism to report grievances regarding labour conditions is available and communicated to its suppliers' workers and relevant stakeholders. Further, the company is encouraged to take steps to ensure that workers in its supply chains are able to exercise their rights to freedom of association and collective bargaining.

Remedy: The company may consider establishing a process to ensure that remedy is provided to workers in its supply chains in cases of forced labour and disclosing details on this process, such as responsible parties, approval procedures, timeframes, and, crucially, engagement with affected stakeholders. To demonstrate to its stakeholders that it has an effective remedy process in place, the company is encouraged to disclose examples of remedy provided to its suppliers' workers, including with respect to specific allegations in its supply chains.
