SUMMARY

HP Inc. (HP), the world's second-largest personal computer vendor,⁴ ranks 4th out of 45 companies. Compared to 2022, the company improved its rank by one place. This is because the company strengthened its disclosure across several indicators, including disclosing three new country-specific human rights impact assessments involving stakeholder consultations, disclosing data demonstrating the functioning of its grievance mechanism available to supplier workers, and extending some of its communication and data gathering to workers beyond the first tier. The company's score is based on its stronger performance on the themes of Commitment & Governance, Traceability & Risk Assessment, and Recruitment. Notably, HP is the second-highest scoring company on the theme of Enabling Workers' Rights by demonstrating an effective grievance mechanism available to suppliers' workers and relevant stakeholders, and details about the practical operation of the mechanism.

KnowTheChain identified two allegations of forced labour in the company's supply chains. The company did not disclose the steps taken to address the allegation nor remedy outcomes for workers. Further, the company does not disclose the steps it has taken to address the risks of alleged Uyghur forced labour across raw materials and supply chain tiers. The company has an opportunity to further improve its performance and disclosure on the themes of Purchasing Practices, Enabling Workers' Rights and Remedy.

LEADING PRACTICES

Grievance Mechanisms: HP reports that it shares information about its grievance channel during its Human Rights 101 and Responsible Recruitment trainings for workers and that these trainings reached 95,000 workers in 2024, including some in sub-tiers.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR IMPROVEMENT

Purchasing Practices: While the company discloses signing a Supplier Social & Environmental Responsibility Agreement with suppliers, "which addresses how HP and the supplier may work collaboratively to achieve the objectives of the supplier code of conduct", to address forced labour risks in its supply chains, the company is encouraged to adopt purchasing practices that decrease the risk of forced labour, such as improving planning and forecasting and prompt payment, and disclose quantitative data evidencing the implementation of responsible purchasing practices. The company is further encouraged to take steps to ensure that pricing includes the full cost of production, including a living wage/income, and may consider ring-fencing labour costs such that they are not impacted during pricing negotiations. The company should consider integrating responsible buying practices in its contracts with suppliers, to ensure that the responsibility for respecting human rights is shared.

Enabling Workers' Rights: To support collective worker empowerment, the company is encouraged to work with local or global trade unions to support freedom of association in its supply chains. Further, the company is encouraged to disclose examples, covering different supply chain contexts, of how it improved freedom of association and/or collective bargaining for its suppliers' workers. The company is also encouraged to disclose the percentage of suppliers' workers covered by collective bargaining agreements. To guarantee protections for supply chain workers on freedom of association and collective bargaining, the company may consider entering into a global framework agreement or enforceable supply chain labour rights agreements with trade unions or worker organisations.

Remedy: While the company demonstrates a grievance handling process and some examples of remedy for suppliers' workers, to demonstrate to its stakeholders that it has an effective remedy process in place, the company is encouraged to disclose a comprehensive grievance handling process including timeframes, internal responsibility, and how the affected rightsholders are engaged in the provision of remedy. The company may also consider disclosing further examples of remedy provided to its suppliers' workers, including with respect to specific allegations in its supply chains.
