SUMMARY

Seagate Technology PLC (Seagate), a supplier to companies including Dell, HPE and Microsoft, ranks joint 14th out of 45 companies. Since 2022, the company adopted version 8 of the RBA Code of Conduct, which removes limitations on the right to freedom of association and collective bargaining and demonstrates clear board oversight of supply chain forced labour policies. However, the company did not improve across other themes. As such the company's score has dropped by 5 points. The company's score is based on stronger performance on the themes of Commitment & Governance, Monitoring and Remedy. However, the company performed particularly poorly on the themes of Purchasing Practices and Enabling Workers' Rights, scoring 0 on these themes. KnowTheChain identified one allegation of forced labour in the company's supply chains, related to Uyghur forced labour. However, the company does not disclose the steps it has taken to address the risks of alleged Uyghur forced labour across raw materials and supply chain tiers. Steps the company could take to address forced labour risks in its supply chains, include strengthening its disclosure and practices on the themes of Purchasing Practices, Recruitment and Enabling Workers' Rights.

LEADING PRACTICES

None.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR IMPROVEMENT

Purchasing Practices: To address forced labour risks in its supply chains, the company is encouraged to adopt purchasing practices that decrease the risk of forced labour, such as improving planning and forecasting and prompt payment, and disclose quantitative data evidencing the implementation of responsible purchasing practices. The company is further encouraged to take steps to ensure that pricing includes the full cost of production, including a living wage/income, and may consider ring-fencing labour costs such that they are not impacted during pricing negotiations. The company should consider integrating responsible buying practices in its contracts with suppliers, to ensure that the responsibility for respecting human rights is shared.

Recruitment: While the company has a policy that prohibits worker-paid recruitment fees, the company may further consider disclosing how it prevents fees being charged in the first instance, such as through mapping of migration corridors and labour agencies used by suppliers, specialised monitoring for fees, and/or evidence of supplier payment of fees to labour agencies directly. It may also consider disclosing steps taken to ensure that such fees are reimbursed to the workers. The company is also encouraged to provide details of how it supports responsible recruitment in its supply chains.

Enabling Workers' Rights: While the company has established a formal, third-party grievance mechanism for 'employees, vendors, contractors, suppliers, former employees and external stakeholders', it is unclear whether, in practice, suppliers' workers have access to, and are aware of, the mechanism to raise grievances about labour conditions. The company is, as such, encouraged to ensure that a formal and effective mechanism to report grievances regarding labour conditions is available and actively communicated to its suppliers' workers and relevant stakeholders, such as worker organisations or labour NGOs. Further, the company is encouraged to take steps to ensure that workers in its supply chains are able to exercise their rights to freedom of association and collective bargaining.
